Welcome to a world of positive print – come and be part of it!

Come and try a new, better, more positive way of promoting and marketing your products and services.

Whatever market you are looking to get to in print, we can help. If it is general commercial – offset or digital, packaging and labels, industrial print, wide format, or even environmentally friendly printing, we have a magazine that can cover all your needs.

As a leading print and digital publisher, Earth Island's market leading circulation, distinctive informal style, incredibly good looks and a greater breadth of editorial, have grown to become the ones that your customers are talking about and taking notice of.

We do not believe in a 'one size fits all' package, and you will find that we will work with you in a very different way to many other business titles.

GREEN FROM THE GROUND UP!

As an environmentally responsible company itself, and also one that cares about its customers, Formara is always willing to share knowledge. Here, the company looks at simple ideas for small companies and start-ups who are looking for more sustainable packaging and print materials.

Starting a new business is an exciting journey filled with endless possibilities, but it comes with its fair share of challenges too. One of the most important yet often overlooked aspects of building a successful start-up today is making sure your business is environmentally friendly right from the 'get-go'. In a world where consumers are increasingly choosing brands that care about the planet, adopting sustainable practices isn't just a good idea, it is essential.

And, where better to start than with your packaging and print materials?

PART OF YOUR DNA
When you are launching a start-up, it can feel like there are a million things demanding your attention. It is easy to think of sustainability as something to tackle later when the business is more established. But here is the thing: building green practices into your business from day one can actually make things easier in the long run.

Think about it this way – if you start with eco-friendly packaging and print solutions now, you won't have to overhaul your operations later. Plus, it shows your customers, and potential investors, that you are serious about making a positive impact. It is not just about being responsible, it is about setting your brand apart in a market that values sustainability more and more each day.

YOU JUST NEED TO KNOW WHERE TO LOOK
With so many green myths around sustainability it is that it is easy to get lost. At the start-up, you are probably already keeping a close eye on your budget, so the idea of spending more on sustainable packaging like a green ink, may seem like a stretch. But here is the good news: there are many ways to make your packaging and print materials more sustainable without breaking the bank. And the best part? These practices can often save you money in the long run.

At Formara, we have been working with start-ups for years, helping them find cost-effective, sustainable solutions that fit within their budgets. Whether it is sourcing recycled materials for your packaging or using printing processes that reduce waste, there are plenty of ways to be green without breaking the bank. And the best part? These practices can often save you money in the long run.

For example, here at Formara, one thing we did was make the switch from using plastic business cards to using a paper-based one that is fully recyclable and compostable. This was a great way to show we were environmentally friendly and to uniquely stamp our brand on the product to showcase our values using creativity.

THE PAY OFF
Choosing sustainable options isn't just good for the environment, it is good for your business too. More and more consumers are looking to support brands that share their values and using eco-friendly is a huge part of that. By committing to sustainability early on, you are building a brand that people can trust and believe in.

But it is not just about customer loyalty. As governments tighten regulations around packaging and waste, being ahead of the curve on sustainability could save you from future headaches and expenses. Starting green now means you will be ready for whatever changes come down the road.

TRANSFORMING YOUR BUSINESS INTO A GREEN ONE
As you will see from our caution white Formara has helped an estate agent 'green' which had both a high-end and a low-end market. The client was looking for a high-end and a low-end market. The client was looking for a high-end and a low-end market. The client was looking for a high-end and a low-end market.

WWW.EARTHISLAND.CO.UK

initially using a less eco-friendly and expensive material for its blotters. By switching to Huthius Superwhite 100% Recycled Paper 300 gsm, we helped them make a significant positive environmental impact while also achieving a dramatic cost saving. This change not only reduced their carbon footprint but also aligned perfectly with their brand's luxury and sustainability ethos.

Can you imagine the amount of money they would have saved if they had done this from day one!

DOING SUSTAINABILITY RIGHT

Take BrewDog for instance, the Scottish craft beer company, which has become a leader in sustainability within the beverage industry. As a start-up that quickly grew into a major player, BrewDog made sustainability a core part of its business. The company has implemented a 'zero waste' initiative in packaging by eliminating unnecessary plastics and opting for recyclable materials. Additionally, BrewDog is committed to reducing its carbon footprint and is a member of the world's first carbon-negative beverages company.

Then there is UpCircle, a relatively new UK-based start-up, which began with the idea of repurposing used coffee grounds into skincare products. But its commitment to sustainable practices extends beyond the core products. As an eco-friendly packaging and marketing materials company, it also prioritises sustainable print materials for all of its packaging and marketing materials.

From the beginning, UpCircle has used 100% recycled paper and cardboard for product packaging, which is printed using eco-friendly inks. The company's marketing materials, including business cards, leaflets, and shipping labels, are all made from post-consumer recycled content, ensuring minimal environmental impact. UpCircle even avoids glossy inks and plastic laminates to make its packaging fully recyclable and compostable.

YOUR PARTNER IN BUILDING A GREEN BUSINESS

Formara is passionate about helping start-ups and smaller businesses thrive, whilst staying true to sustainable values. We believe that no business is too small to make a difference, and we will help to provide you with the tools and support you need to get there.

Whether you are just getting started or looking to grow, the company can help you find the right sustainable packaging and print solutions that align with your goals, on your budget.

Starting a new business is tough, but making sustainable a part of your journey from the beginning doesn't have to be. By choosing eco-friendly packaging, print materials or suppliers, you are not just helping the planet, you are building a brand that stands out in today's market.

Remember, being green is about more than just doing the right thing, it is about building a smarter, stronger business. And with Formara by your side, you have got what you need to make it happen.

YOUR BRAND PERSONIFIED

Let creativity know no bounds when it comes to packaging for your products. Easyfairs highlights the importance of packaging.

Whether the biggest global brand or the smallest artisan producer, packaging is probably the most important item in your sales and marketing toolbox. Having the greatest and most innovative product in its category is not enough, it must be supported by packaging that matches and enhances the potential of your carefully crafted and expertly manufactured (and carefully monitored) vegan chocolate, flavoured gelatin, IPA, hot sauce, ketchup, kombucha, gummies, fish food, etc.

To highlight the consumer journey, packaging is likely the first point of engagement between your brand and your customers. Whether they are trying a new product or making a repeat purchase, the moment of truth is a well-documented and understood part of the retail experience, both in-person and online. Packaging's part in this consumer making process is critical, being both aesthetic and tactile. Packaging goes on to provide an intimate and repetitive engagement level, helping keep your brand and products top of mind and driving repeat business. From low and clear brand cereal boxes to high end glass perfume decanters, we each engage daily with products purchased daily, if not weekly and monthly.

Alongside the product itself, packaging is ever present in a brand's interactions with consumers. It is the brand's face, the brand's personality, and the brand's voice. Such waypoints along your packaging journey illustrate the need to be as creative, dynamic and engaging as possible with your design and execution. From the simplest label applied to a glass jar to direct decoration of the jar itself, the potential to bring your packaging – and your brand's personality – to life is immense. And many choose London Packaging Week as the ideal starting point.

ALL PACKS GREAT AND SMALL

Let us start with the pack structure itself. Advanced materials and machinery mean even the wildest shapes and specialised profiles can now be realised and commercialised, and often from previously unsuitable substrates. Paper and microflute corrugates can be used to create lightweight yet strong sliding sleeves, telescopic tubes, flexographic boxes and fibre based boxes, whilst monomaterial plastics can be shipped, stretched and shrunk in various creative ways and rigid formed moulding into complex shapes that set your packaging apart from the rest. 3D modelling and printing allow structures to be tried and tested digitally and physically before being put into production, ensuring structural sustainability and durability.

Once you have settled on a material/shape combination, an endless array of decoration techniques than present themselves. All are being advanced on an almost daily basis, making them suitable for an ever-increasing number of application environments and uses. Take full colour variable data printing, which is now available to more of the market than ever before, owing to leaps in digital printing processes. Those for directly printing variable data onto glass and other cylindrical surfaces are a perfect example of this and present a smorgasbord of design potential for designers and brands alike. This can be used to create emotional attachment and enhance exclusivity. Antiquique print processes are keeping up with the pace too, if you think of such things as photosensitive (light), thermochromic (temperature) and conductive (electricity) inks, which can be used to produce packs that are essentially functional and/or highly engaging.

BEYOND THE BOX

Don't however let your creativity conclude with the physical pack. Today, myriad smart and connected packaging tools exist to take your packaging from the physical world into the digital realm. This gives you the best of both worlds and using QR codes and the like for authentication purposes or a whole other world for your brand, realised through packaging. No longer are interactions confined to the supermarket shelf or store cupboard, now they can take place everywhere and anywhere there is a connected device present.

For any brand this is a highly valuable proposition. It gives you the ability to connect with consumers on a personal level and often through a device they have in their hand or pocket most of the day. This gives your brand exposure to those who matter the most – the consumer – on a previously unattainable level. Of course, consumers will expect a payoff for this level of engagement, but if you can deliver on that through discounts, treats, prizes, etc., you will create a priceless emotional attachment and connection with your brand.

There is also the ability to use the likes of accessible QR codes or a connected packaging platform to make packaging practical. Such tools are used to assist those with a visual impairment or other challenge to engage with the world around them. When deployed on pack, this makes your product accessible to even more of the market and positions your brand as a socially responsible enterprise with the needs of the wider world in view.

All these tools and many more already exist today. Tomorrow even more will exist, making it as easy as it is important to make your packaging your own. An event such as London Packaging Week fulfils this by providing the perfect playground to learn about and explore these opportunities, as well as to meet with and hear from those designing, developing and introducing cutting edge packaging concepts into the market.

Make sure you are there, and raise your profile and presence by putting your own stamp on bottles and boxes, to own your brand's personality through packaging.

Registration is now open for London Packaging Week 2024, which takes place 11 and 12 September at Excel. For further information, please see www.londonpackagingweek.com

BALANCING BUSINESS
 If you measure and manage your business sustainably, you will not only improve your success, but will limit your impacts on the environment too.

Balancing is important in everything, but in business it is especially so. Weighing the vital importance of success and making profit with running a good business that has the right ethics of heart, can be a challenge. It is in the market where competition is the one getting the lid down, steady and cost effectively to the highest quality. It is the most important thing. Unless you get it big business would struggle to anything into the house that you can work before your fall over can be daunting. Budgets are huge. And, the desire to do anything that is not your basic job becomes just that - waste. It is the business environment, now being an environment that is mainly financial, and how do you integrate your spending and sometimes money on something that might have strange benefits?

IT JUST MAKES BUSINESS BETTER
 The most compelling reason for acting sustainably is not the moral or the ethical, and even if you do make it, it will help you to be more productive. However, it is the fact that you are responsible and it will help you to be more productive. However, it is the fact that you are responsible and it will help you to be more productive. However, it is the fact that you are responsible and it will help you to be more productive.

SO, WHERE DO YOU EVEN START?
 Every one of us has our lot to do when it comes to being sustainable - no matter how small. You just need to create the balance between good business and care for the environment. It is to start with the little things and when you see the positive impact that has on business, then it is worth trying out the bigger projects, or where you would like to make improvements.

BALANCE IT OUT!
 - Consider how you measure your business - are you only looking at profit and not your carbon footprint or other environmental impact? There will be a trade-off, but it is a trade-off that you can manage.
 - Define what your business sustainability goals are.
 - Work out what you can do to reduce your carbon footprint.
 - Measure your progress and adjust your goals accordingly.
 - Don't forget to communicate your goals to your employees and stakeholders.
 - Be transparent about your progress and challenges.
 - Celebrate your successes and share your story.

PUT NATURE FIRST
 Economic growth cannot come at the expense of resource conservation. There is a consensus that social and environmental value ought to trump shareholder value.

AGREEMENT
 The two generations of future and future business leaders agree that preserving the conservation of natural resources is of paramount importance and are urging businesses to turn their previous scepticism about 'green' initiatives into action.

URGENT PRIORITY
 Additionally, both generations indicate that business, politicians, and consumers need to do more to ensure sustainable management of scarce natural resources.

SOLUTIONS AWARDS

New for 2025 – The Solutions Awards

The idea

To award companies and people who are excelling within the industry, and focused on the best people and principles within print, packaging and design.

Rather than just looking at the quality of print, which can be subjective at best, these awards will be judged against the backdrop of sustainable and socio-ethical approaches.

The awards will be run year round, with a number of categories available including business of the year, sustainable company of the year, CEO/director of the year and customer service team of the year.

The awards will be run predominantly online, as our focus will be on supporting the winners with a promotional and marketing package as part of their win, to give them something tangible and worthwhile to drive business forward and to allow maximum benefit.

The awards will develop worldwide and it would be logistically difficult for all of our winners to attend a localised ceremony.

Benefits to being a partner

Great brand extension in print and online: Unrivalled chance to promote your company within the industry.

- Year long coverage in the Earth Island publications and online, plus other promotional opportunities.
- A package of editorial, advertising and online content across our portfolio. You can choose to run that in either Print Solutions, Packaging Solutions, Green Solutions or IndPrint – or a mixture to suit your needs.
- Your logo on all awards' collateral and the dedicated website page.
- A full page ad in the post awards commemorative handbook, which will showcase the winners and sponsors.

All this for just £3000 as a category sponsor, with year round promotion.

Call David on 01892 522563 or 07711 004558

Further information specific to our awards can be sent to interested parties.

Media packages and promotional opportunities
